

Paul Stanley currently serves as the Chief Engineer for the Office of Information Technology Services, the IT component for the National Counterterrorism Center (NCTC). Prior to serving in his current position, Mr. Stanley served as a Senior Data Scientist for NCTC's Office of Data Strategy and Innovation (ODSI). Mr. Stanley began his technical career as self-taught developer, after working as an Intelligence Analyst at the FBI and as a Intelligence Collector and Collection Manager at the NSA. Prior to these positions, Mr. Stanley was trained in Arabic and served as a full-time Cryptologic Linguist in the United States Air Force. Mr. Stanley has a BA in Natural Sciences and Mathematics and a Master's degree in Business Administration.